How to start, build and run a school in India

a talk by Hans Maag

During his time as buyer of hand knotted carpets he was confronted with the problem of child labour. NGO's tried to force the company he was working for into their system but because of corruption he decided, together with a buyer from MANOR and with the help of a trustworthy supplier, to build and start a school in Palhaya, UP, India. The school started in 1996 and 15 years later there are 450 children attending.
