What happens next ...?

Those of you who came to the sewage trip round Zürich will know how fascinating, and above all vital, this at first sight unpalatable subject is for us all. Where in Zürich we heard how this was handled in the past, we will be able to see at the Aare-Langmatt works in Wildegg, Langmatt 886, the present multi-faceted state of the art treatment.

What happens to the 300 litres of waste water produced per person per day? We will be shown round the plant where it is treated and purified, resulting in water that is no longer - er - coloured, but is quite clean and clear enough to be fed back into the Aare, or even drunk!! (I dare you!!) The guide will speak German, he's coming specially in out of office hours.

We meet at 09:45 in the car park in front of the plant, which you get to down the Jurastrasse under the railway line, then taking the first right. You can walk it from the Wildegg railway station. We all know there are places to go to afterwards in Wildegg, for lunch and a chat.
