8911 Rifferswil

This park, perhaps well known to some of us, is a unique moorland park established by Robert Seleger from 1956 onwards, after he had witnessed the devastating effect of a bitterly cold winter on plant life.

He collected hardy plants from all over the world, and in particular from the high mountains of Nepal – of course, rhododendrons

His life's work still abounds with a wealth of wonderful plants. As well as rhododendrons and azaleas there are peonies, water lilies and ferns of every variety, all to be enjoyed at leisure as you wander peacefully along the positive maze of footpaths.

We meet outside the main entrance at 2 o'clock. There is a car park outside, and you can also get there by public transport, bus 223. Download a map from
